EXPORTS TO CHINA.

A return asked for in the House of Commons by Mr Lloyd George (President of the Board-of Trade) was issued as a White Paper, showing the exports to China, inclusive of Hongkong, from the United Kingdom, Germany, and the United States, for the years 1887 to 1900, says a London exchange. From this it appears that the average value of exports to China from this country during the years 1887-91 was £8,627,000, from Germany £1,426,000, and from United States £1,858,000. In the five years 1892-6 the United States' average / had risen to £2.008,000, as against ' £7,195,000 from the United Kingdom, and £1,692,000 from Germany. The next fiveyear period saw the export of the United States advance to nearly ball that of Great Britain, the figures being £4,121,000 and $\pm 8.368.000$: and this phenomenal increase $^{\prime}$ was maintained in the five years ending 1906, whom goods to the value of £8,342,000 ? were sent to China from the States, as against £12,803,000 sent from the United Kingdom. The average increase in the period 1902-6 over that of 1887 91 was in the case of Great Britnin 48.4%, in that of Germany 141.6 , and in that of the United States 348-91

H. A. L. STEAMER IN PERIL. An Exciting Experience.

The "Japan Herald" states that the German steamer Marcellus, of the Hamburg America Line, arrived in Yokohama harbour on Thursday evening, in distress. The Marcollus was bound from Moji for San Francisco, and left the former port on the 15th inst. at 3 p.m., at which time a line breeze was blowing. On the 17th at 10 a.m. the ship was out of the Bungo Channel, but she had hardly entered the Pacific before she was caught in a gale, and commenced to ship water over the deck. The wind was blowing from N.N.E. During the afternoon the wind increased, and in the evening the Marcellus was about in the centre of a typhoon. At 8 p.m. a steampipe connecting the steering gear on the bridge with the engine was broken off by the heavy sea, and water began to pour into the engine room through the leak thus left, with the result that the engines were stopped. Almost simultaneously, a bulkhead paring, the bunkers from the engine room gave way, and a mixture of coal and water rushed into the en gine room, filling all parts of the engine Now began a hard time for the crew. One of the bidders leading from deck up to the bridge was entirely torn off by the sea and washed overhourd, while one of the ventilators leading down to the stokehold on the starboard side uset with the same fare. Most of the piping on deck supply ing the winches with steam was likewise torn off, and even one of the doors of the steering house on the bridge was washed away. Away aft the deck-telegraph and the patent lead winch were washed overboard. The worst dumme done, however, was on the port side just before the bridge, where the sen tore . hole in the deck, through which the water poured down into the forehold. One of the sailors, an American, was sent forward on the archove the ventila. the covers over the the was exhight by a sen down amidships, From antil the unday night (the including officers corking day and night, bailing water out of the engine toom with buckets. Even the rook had to stay in the galley as long as 21 hours on a stretch, stand ing by to give the mon an occasional little to eat. On Saturday night their work was so far crowned with success that they could think of having a little rest, and they were then divided into gangs, working six hours and resting three hours. On Monday last

SAVED IN TIME.

In matters of matringony there is many a slip twixt cup and lip, as the following extraordinary and authentic story, of a broken-off wedding, which comes from Paris, proves :---All the preliminaries for a fashionable wedding had been arranged. The party arrived in carriages at the official residence of the Mayor of the district in which the bride lived. The lady was handed up the steps of the building by her father, and close behind came the bridogroom. Suddenly an accident happened; he had put his fant on the satin train of the bride's dress. There was a tearing sound; an ugly ront appeared. The bride's face flamed with anger. Turning round she flashed out one word:

"Imbecile." The offender stopped. The thousand apologies which had risen to his lips died there. He turned very pale; then, to the consternation of all, he disappeared. There was no marriage; the wedding breakfast was scattered, untasted by the guests. The mishap had proved too sharp a test of the lady's temper and good-will,

and had lost her a man's heart. WEATHER REPORT.

Press Reviews of Previous Works THE GUARDIAN, July 10, 1907:

Books of reference. 'It would be difficult to find a buck of reference moretrustworthy or more complete, THE TIMES LITERARY SUPPLE-MENT.' July 12, 1907: 'Twentieth Century Impressions of Ceylon is, perbaps, not a very appropriate title for a book which aiment conveying something very much more than mere impressions. The volume is extremely handsome and ornamental, the binding is magnificent; the paper excellent, the illustrations, which are said to number 2000, cultivation, pearl fisheries, and every branch of trade and industry practiced in the Island. 'THE SPECTATOR,' June 1, 1907 Twentieth Century Impressions of Ceylon (Lloyd's Greater Britain Publishing Company, Limited)—This very sumptuous volume, with its 876 quarto pages and its admirable executed. There is much valuable information regarding ten and rubber illustrative photographs, numbering nearly 3000, is well worthy of its objects." THE SCOTSMAN, May 23, 1907 Yet by shatever biographical name it is described, it is an invaluable compendium of facts and figures for enquirers specially interested in the present state of Ceylon; and its material features, it should be added, reflect credit upon everyone concerned in its production." 'THE MORNING POST,' Jane 29, 1907: This is done in this case, for you shall not think of anything which might be worth knowning about 'India's Pearl Drop' and be disappointed in finding information about it.' 'THE DAILY NEWS,' July 9, 1907: Every aspect of the Island, historical commercial political and legal, and so forth, has been treated and in each case the subject hasbeen entrusted to an expert.'

'THE FINANCIAL NEWS,' July 15. 1907: ('Reviewed by Percy F. Martin, F.R.G.S.) 'It has long been a repreach among publishers that, smid the heterogeneous Lterature which continually pours forth from the press, little or no attention is devoted to the numerous interests which our own colonies possess, and concerning which the general public have—and can obtain-little or no information. To a great extent thisomission is repaired by the occasional issue of such works as " wentieth Century Impressions of Ceylon; its History, Paople, Commerce, Industries and Resources," edited by Mr Arnold Wright, and published by Lloyda' Greater Britain Publishing Company, Limited, Pressure is highest and increasing over Tudor Street, E. C. Comprehensive as the sub-title of this Randsome volume is, it by moderate N.E. winds over the N. part of | beautiful "Pearl-drop of India"-as Caylon has been not inaptly termed—ia l overlooked, and the same scrupulous and discriminating care which has characterised publications emanating from the same source is observable in this.

'TIMES OF CEYLON,' July 17th, 1907: *The book forms a most useful directory to the business houses in the fort and to the commercial industry of the Island generally. In this way it should serve a very useful purpose. In concluding a lengthy, but far from complete, running review on this monumental book on Ceylon, we once again take the opportunity of complimentingall concerned on the careful and thorough manuar in which it has been produced from the first page to the last. There is not the elightest evidence of scamped work anywhere, on the contrary every page bears ample testimony of the admirable duction both in London and in Coylon.

. THE OEYLON INDEPENDENT. July 13th, 1907: 'No expense has seem. ingly been spared in its preparation to schieve a satisfactory result, one that would reflect credit both on the Colony and the
